

The Ultimate Guide to Dating in Taiwan

TrulyChinese

In many aspects, Taiwan is the treasure island of East Asia, with lovable people and picture-perfect sceneries that are gems to cherish and behold.

If you are seeking to date or even start your love story in the beautiful nation, let this ebook be your guide. Before you know it, this may help you chance upon your destiny!

Table of Contents

Chapter 1
Taiwanese Dating Customs	4
Chapter 2
Taiwanese Dating in the Modern World	7
Chapter 3
Falling in Love in Taiwan: Tips and Advice	10
Chapter 4
Where to Go on Dates in Taiwan	12
Chapter 5
Where to Find Taiwanese Singles Online	14

Chapter 1

Taiwanese Dating Customs

Taiwan is home to over 23 million people, primarily descendants of immigrants from China. The country's abundance of indigenous ethnic populations shapes and inspires their culture, especially on dating.

To better understand your date, let's navigate the many facets of the dating culture in Taiwan, from ethnic nuances to family dynamics that you should be aware of. Each point below will cover important matters that you need to learn about the Taiwanese dating culture.

1. Reserved nature

Taiwanese are shy and reserved because they hold high regard for filial piety and cultivating social relationships. Older generations train men to respect the women, while the women must be homemakers and a supporter of a strong man (their husbands). As such, men should be the provider while women must make a happy and healthy home.

If you're dating a Taiwanese man, expect to be the one to do the talking the first few days of the relationship. They are inherently shy at first, but they start to reveal themselves once you get past their shyness. Eventually, they will be comfortable showing their fun and wild side to you.

It is innate for Taiwanese women to sacrifice their dreams for the men in their household. When you date a Taiwanese woman, empower her to make brave life and career choices. Let her know that it's okay to make unique decisions. Be her biggest supporter and continuously encourage her to follow her dreams.

2. Family is everything

Family is the top priority in Taiwan. They value their family so much that they pay high regard to their opinion.

In Taiwan and most Asian countries, family extends to cousins, aunts, uncles, and grandparents. As such, Taiwanese people seek out their whole family's opinions on tough life decisions. Even when the advice clashes with their feelings, they hardly ignore them.

Moreover, despite their financial stability, Taiwan's young professionals still live in their parents' houses. One of the many reasons for this is filial obligations and gender status. It may also be because they are so tight-knit that the thought of living in another place is as sad as it is daunting.

So, when you date a Taiwanese single, understand their parents' decisions. When you show your future date how much you respect their parents, you allow them a peek of your kind and obedient personality.

3. Conservative

In Western countries, young people go out on dates to test their compatibility with another person. This is not the case in Taiwan's dating culture.

Taiwanese don't go on dates with people they are not in a relationship with or until one of them confesses. They see dating as a privilege for couples and should only be done by those who want a long-term and serious relationship. When the Taiwanese date, it's because they already want to start a committed relationship.

Chapter 2

Taiwanese Dating in the Modern World

While many Taiwanese singles are still reserved, family-oriented, and conservative, the younger generations have evolved and adopted the Western views of dating.

Here, we talked about the dating customs they adopted and the subtleties of their modern dating perspective.

1. Fun to be with

Taiwanese are creative when it comes to date night. They will take you to the night market, where you need to catch shrimps and grill them to eat. They will then let you try their selection of oil-based foods and rice. After the meal, they will also tour you to the best milk tea houses in Taiwan. Usually, the last destination to a modern Taiwanese dating style involves karaoke.

2. Sincere

Taiwanese are not afraid to say 'I love you' when they already feel it. That is even after a week of being in a relationship. In retrospect, they say these three words earlier because the courting stage was longer due to their prolonged getting-to-know phase.

3. Respectful

When you get to Taiwan and start dating a Taiwanese single, they will make you feel welcome and respect your personal space at the same time. They will not judge even when they notice something different. They'll recognize your religious or political standpoints regardless of their personal beliefs.

4. Good at advice

When you ask your Taiwanese date for life advice, they will tell you what you want to hear when the relationship is at its early stage. Remember that they are inherently reserved and polite, so they do this to make you feel better.

But, if the relationship is a lot stronger and they know you better, you'll see a beautiful and deeper side of them. You'll eventually find out that they give the best life advice. Once you get past their mask of shyness, you'll discover that they are sincere and outspoken.

5. Helpful and supportive

Taiwanese singles want to help or offer their full support, especially when they see you struggling. This is regardless of the matter's severity, or even if you did not ask for it.

Taiwanese men, in general, love to play the knight that saves the damsel in distress. You may now think they are overbearing, irritating, or pushy, but they mean well. They feel gratified and connected when they know they can be of help.

But, if this is a major dealbreaker for you, don't ghost them. Instead, let your partner know. We bet they will understand and consider your feelings about it.

6. Consistent

If you date a Taiwanese single, you don't need to worry about your relationship going cold in the long run as they are consistent. Their sweet reminders via chat or text messages are as romantic as they were the first time you got to know them — sometimes more endearing.

Chapter 3

Falling in Love in Taiwan: Tips and Advice

Whether it's the alluring eyes or the innocent smile, you can't quite figure out what it is about a Taiwanese single that's got you swooning.

Now that you're in love, it's your turn to impress your Taiwanese date. Below are the tips for you to take for your date to like you — or who knows, for you to end up with a lifetime partner.

1. Learn the language

One of the many reasons a Taiwanese person may be quiet in front of you is that they are not very fluent in English. When dating Taiwanese singles, it's essential that you understand them. They may understand what you say, but sometimes, true intentions get lost in translation. So, it's better to learn the language.

2. Have a good sense of humor

Make your date laugh with your funny jokes and witty comebacks. Having a good sense of humor helps them feel safe and comfortable. You get to laugh together about and the absurdities of life.

Nonetheless, be careful to know the line between a joke and an insult. Your date may not be as amused at you as you hoped they would be if you joked about race or political issues.

3. Give them time to adapt

Your date will be accustomed to some dating styles that you're not familiar with. They do not know you, your culture, and your practices. The relationship will be as new for them as much as it is for you. Allow them some time to understand and be comfortable with you.

4. Accept their beliefs

Taiwanese believe in the power of rituals or altar offerings. If you don't think these practices work, don't encourage them to do the same. Accept that there are just things that you disagree with, and that's okay.

5. Discover new things together

One of the joys of dating someone from a different culture is discovering new things together.

When you experience new things together, you are creating a shared adventure that is exciting. Trying new things can also strengthen your connection and maintain the spark.

Chapter 4

Where to Go on Dates in Taiwan

Here are five of the country's most picture-perfect attractions you should visit with your date to further learn their heritage and dating customs — and to gain brownie points for knowing these places.

1. Taipei 101 Observatory

Located at the heart of the bustling capital, Taipei 101 Observatory is the tallest building on the island. Visit Taipei 101 Observatory for a romantic date night with your sweetheart. See the glittering city in its nighttime glory for a beautiful evening together.

2. Rainbow Village

As its name suggests, Rainbow Village is a vibrant and colorful tourist attraction that features structures full of hand-painted art. This Taichung-located destination boasts its rich culture, making your date aesthetically and intellectually exciting.

3. Sun Moon Lake

Visit the beautiful Sun Moon Lake if a pleasant daytime date in Taiwan suits your fancy. Take your Taiwanese date out for a romantic afternoon of biking, followed by delightful tea. You can even up the ante and spend the evening at a renowned five-star hotel by Sun Moon Lake.

4. Local River

Take your date on a romantic boat cruise along the Love River in Kaohsiung. Its romantic environment will make your date even more special. You can take in the beautiful sights and scenes of Taiwan together.

Make the most out of the location and arrange a date at sunset. But be sure to book ahead; lovers all over Taiwan frequent the Love River, especially on weekends and romantic holidays.

5. Pingxi District

Have a unique and unforgettable cultural experience with your significant other when you visit Pingxi District. You can both send a sky lantern to the skies with your wishes for the rosy future.

Chapter 5

Where to Find Taiwanese Singles Online

If you're from a foreign country, you don't need to haul your bags to Taiwan to start your Taiwanese dating journey. Thankfully, you can meet fellow singles simply through our phones and computers at home.

Online dating offers a chance for two people from different walks of life to come together and form a connection. Most often, this bond ends up in a beautiful and long-lasting relationship. Reports concluded that online dating apps and websites help people tread through love and friendship, especially during a pandemic. They allow friends to reconnect and enable new connections to take form. But, the rise of online dating means the increase of fake account handles. Hence, it may be hard to meet our perfect pair. Thankfully, TrulyChinese can help.

TrulyChinese is at the forefront of Taiwan's online dating. With its advanced matching algorithm that analyzes a large number of functions and allows you to find the perfect match quickly, TrulyChinese is one of the best and safest dating sites in Asia.

At TrulyChinese, you gain access to features designed with its users in mind. These features include translation, free and easy-to-use search filters, compatibility evaluator, dynamic communication options, 24/7 support staff, and a professionally designed user interface. Moreover, the communication feature provides a high privacy level. There is also an archive of good-read guides and tips about online dating in Taiwan on its Blog page.

Conclusion

Whether you found them online or offline, dating a Taiwanese single who lives an entirely different walk of life than you allows you to see life from a fresh perspective. Take these tips and advice to heart, and a fruitful relationship is on the way. Happy dating!

Start your dating journey in Taiwan today.
Tap on our logo to learn more.

Truly Chinese